

THE SOCIETY FOR COURT STUDIES

Virtual Scholarship Series Call for Proposals

The European branch of the Society is delighted to announce the call for proposals for the 2024 programme of the Virtual Scholarship Series.

What is the Virtual Scholarship Series?

The series provides a platform that supports the professional and research development of scholars at all levels, especially doctoral and early career researchers in the field of court studies. The series also offers opportunities for scholars to share their research, gain professional engagement experience, acquire new subject-based and practical knowledge, and develop skills. The series also highlights interdisciplinary research and topics that are thematically connected to court studies. The series takes place in different formats: standard seminars, panel seminars, roundtable discussions, and workshops. The virtual seminars are held each month on a Thursday at 18:00 CET via Zoom.

Call for proposals

If you are interested in giving a seminar presentation about research being developed, panel presentation, organising a roundtable, or conducting a workshop, please send a proposal/recommendation to europe@courtstudies.org. We are particularly interested in proposals that feature research on courts and colonialism, sexualities, and interregional perspectives over time, and digital research methods connected to court studies. Additionally, we welcome proposals from researchers across disciplines that are relevant to court studies, including historical social networks and material culture. Proposals should be no more than 300 words max.*

For panel presentations, roundtables or workshops, include content, aims/objectives, length and arrangements, names of all participants, and recommend a panel chair.

Deadline

For consideration in the 2024 series, proposals/recommendations must be received by 15 December 2024. After this date, we will continue to accept proposals/recommendations for ongoing consideration.

If you have questions, ideas, or suggestions, please send them to organizers at the European branch at europe@courtstudies.org.

We look forward to receiving your proposals!
